ENTERED ACCORDING TO ACT OF CONGRESS, IN THE YEAR 1871, BY T. M. HADDOCK, IN THE OFFICE OF THE LIBRARIAN OF CONGRESS, AT WASHINGTON, D. C.

INTRODUCTORY.

IN presenting the first edition of our work to the public, we do so with the hope that our friends and patrons will overlook any slight errors we may have committed. Those who are conversant with the toils, trials and labors incident to a work of this character, are well aware that perfection is impossible—the very nature of the work precludes the idea. The many classes to be dealt with in obtaining the desired information, embraces the well informed and ignorant—, with the latter class we are thrown upon our own resources for the best information possible; at times we have been compelled to resort to the force pump until quite exhausted. We have endeavored to meet the want so long felt in our city, and have devoted our whole time, care and attention with that end in view, and trust that our patrons, who have been so liberal towards us, (for which they have our sincere thanks,) will approve our humble efforts. Our familiarity and experience with our first effort in this city, we trust will enable us to render the future editions of our work more acceptable.

WE cannot close without expressing our gratitude and renewed thanks for the many favors and kindnesses received from the merchants, manufacturers and citizens of Wilmington, so essential to the completion of our work; also to our patrons abroad are we indebted for their encouragement. Trusting for a continuance of your favors in our future efforts, and hoping we may improve sufficiently to merit the same,

We are fraternally yours,

T. M. HADDOCK,
Compiler.

The city of Wilmington, the seat of New Hanover County, and the largest and most flourishing of the seaports of the State, is pleasantly situated on the east bank of the Cape Fear river, and just opposite and below the confluence of its two branches, the North East and the North West Cape Fear. It is 28 miles from the mouth of the river, in latitude $34^{\circ} 12'$, longitude $67^{\circ} 56'$, and is located on a peninsula, it being just about 7 miles from the city to the ocean on the east. It is built upon a range of high sand hills, and extends some two miles along the banks of the river, and above one mile back toward the ocean. Its streets are regularly and beautifully laid out, very nearly all of them running at right angles with each other, and ornamented, in the older localities, with beautiful shade trees, principally of oak, elm, sycamore, and that species known with us as the fragrant China tree. It has many fine residences, with ample grounds around them, adorned, in many instances, with rare plants. It is distant by rail, about 26 hours from Baltimore, and about 36 from New York.

ITS ORIGIN.

The original founders and the early settlers of the place were all of English extraction, and many of the descendants of them are to be found on the Cape Fear at this day. The parent settlement was the town of Brunswick, which was planted on the river, some sixteen miles below the city, at the place now known as Fort Anderson, and which was the scene, during the late war, of one of the most terrible bombardments that has been known in the history of the Western World. Brunswick was settled in 1725 by Col. Maurice Moore, who received from the Lord Proprietors a grant of 1500 acres of land on the west side of the river, and who proceeded to lay off a town on its most eligible site, which was named by him Brunswick. Here emigrants soon flocked—some from Carolina, others from Virginia, and still others from old England. Many of them were gentlemen of culture and refinement, and among the scant records that have come down to us we find the ancestors of some of the most illustrious men of the Cape Fear region.

In 1730 and '31 the first pioneers settled upon the lands of the Cape Fear on what is now the site of the present populous city. In 1733 John Watson, James Wimble, Joshua Grainger and Michael Wiggins agreed to lay out a town on the site of the then village, and a survey for that purpose was accordingly made. In 1735 John Watson received a grant for six hundred and forty acres, located on the west bank of the Cape Fear, and including the village, under the name of Newton. In 1739, through the influence of Gabriel Johnston, at that time the Royal Governor of the Province, the name of Newton was changed, by legislative enactment, to Wilmington, in honor of Spence Compton, Earl of Wilmington.

From this time may be dated the real history of Wilmington, as it then received its first commercial impetus. There are no statistics to prove the fact, but it is evident that at the date given above the inhabitants of Brunswick were fast leaving that place and settling in Wilmington. The act giving it its name authorized the town to send a member to the Lower House, and directed the Clerk and Register, and the Naval officer and Collector, to remove from Port Brunswick to this place. From this date the chroniclers tell us nothing more relative to the history of Brunswick. It is believed that it was burned by the British during the Revolutionary War, but that Wilmington had previously absorbed nearly all its inhabitants.

HISTORY.

The growth of the place, from this period of the Revolution to the breaking out of the war between the States, was slow, yet steady. In 1758, a period of twenty-eight years from its first settlement, there were only sixty owners of real estate in the town, the aggregate value being £6,625, or about $33,000, and four years after, in 1762, the population approximated but one thousand souls.

In September, 1761, the most violent equinoctial gale yet known here raged along the Cape Fear coast. It continued for four days, and was very disastrous in its effects. Several houses were blown over, and all the vessels then in the river, with but a few exceptions, were driven ashore. Such was the fury of the storm that the waves forced open a new passage from the river to the ocean, which has since become one of the highways of our commerce, and which was called New Inlet, the name it now bears. Previous to the period of the gale the peninsula in which the city is situated extended entirely to the mouth of the river, unbroken by any inlet to the sea, and included Smith's Island and Bald Head.

On September 1st, 1764, the first newspaper ever published in this section of the State was issued at this place. It was called the North Carolina Gazette and Weekly Post Boy, and was edited and published by a Scotchman named Andrew Stewart.

North Carolina has truly and justly claimed precedence of the colonies in a Declaration of Independence, for at Charlotte, in Mecklenburg County, on the 20th day of May, 1775, was drawn, signed and sealed, a declaration of her own independence. Yet the Cape Fear, as a section, must ever take precedence of North Carolina as a State. When, in 1765, the news was received here of the passage, by the British Parliament, of the famous American Stamp Act, it was bitterly opposed and denounced; and when, in the following year, the British sloop-of-war Diligence arrived in the Cape Fear river, laden with the stamps, she was peremptorily refused permission to land them, and all intercourse with the shore was denied her. Col. John Ashe, of New Hanover, and Col. Hugh Waddell, of Brunswick, each with his Company of hardy yeomanry behind him, stood at the quay at Brunswick to meet them. At their demand the Captain of the Diligence promised not to attempt to land the stamps. They then seized the enemy's boat, and raising a mast and a flag in it, placed it upon a cart and proceeded in triumph to Wilmington. The town was rent with acclamations of joy, and that night the houses were illuminated. At the head of the people, Colonels Ashe and Waddell the next day besieged the Governor's house, and demanded that James Houston, the Stamp Master, be delivered to them. Intimidated by their demands and threats, Governor Tryon complied, when Houston was conducted to the Market House, and, in presence of the whole people, made to swear never to execute the Act.

Early in the year 1775 it was evident to the citizens of the Cape Fear region that war with the mother country was imminent. They therefore, on June 19th of that year, organized themselves into an association, the avowed object of which was resistance, by arms if need be, to the increasing aggressions of the British government. A Committee of Safety was appointed, and every man instinctively began to prepare for the struggle that all could see was rapidly approaching. Fort Johnson, situated at the mouth of the river, at what is now Smithville, and which had been built by the Province in 1745, attracted the attention of the Committee, and thus early its capture was resolved upon. Josiah Martin, who had succeeded Tryon as Governor of the Province, becoming alarmed at the attitude of the citizens, fled to this fort for protection. Johnston was well armed and supplied, and was further protected by the guns of His Majesty's war vessel Cruiser, which lay close up to the fort. Yet, notwithstanding these facts, its capture was decided on, and on the 18th of July, nearly a year previous to the National Declaration of Independence, Col. John Ashe, at the head of a band of trusty patriots, appeared before the works and demanded its surrender. Martin at once fled to his ship, and the works were captured and destroyed under the very guns of the British vessel.

The most important event of the Revolutionary War, which can properly pertain to the Wilmington section, was the battle of Moore's Creek, which occurred about eighteen miles from the city, at a place where the county bridge crosses the above named stream. This battle was fought February 27th, 1776, between the Scotch Tories, under Brigadier-General McDonald, and a much smaller body of the patriot Whigs, under Colonels Lillington and Caswell. The Tories were on their way to this place, to effect a junction with Sir Peter Parker and Major-General Sir Henry Clinton, who arrived in the Cape Fear, with a military and naval armament, on the 18th April, 1776. They were completely routed, with the loss of many officers and men, arms, accoutrements, &c. The victory was important in that it broke up an intended British campaign in North Carolina. Sorely disappointed at the result, Clinton, despairing of obtaining a foothold in the Cape Fear section, after landing with a portion of his troops, and devastating a part of Brunswick County, re-embarked and sailed for Charleston on the 4th of June.

From the close of the Revolution is to be dated a long era of peace and prosperity for the inhabitants of the little town of Wilmington. Commerce and industrial pursuits revived, and soon wealth began to reward earnest labor. The society, too, of the Cape Fear was not one of its least charms. Men of culture and intelligence, and many of no mean order of literary merit, soon flocked to the town, and in a little while the place had achieved a reputation for its hospitality and social refinement, that clings to it to this day. The late Southern war put an end to the old time prosperity of the place, and drew a line of demarcation between Wilmington as it was and Wilmington as it is, almost as distinctly as if a new city had been built upon the site of the old one. Old time institutions were swept away by it, old theories abolished, and an entirely new one inaugurated. Pray God that it may prove as happy and as prosperous as was the old.

The first overt act of war was made on the 16th day of April, 1861, when the forts below here, then only Caswell and Johnston, were seized by order of His Excellency, John W. Ellis, Governor of the State. The troops engaged in this undertaking were all volunteer organizations from this city, and were as follows: Wilmington Light Infantry, Capt. Wm. L. DeRosset; Wilmington Rifle Guards, Capt. O. P. Meares; German Volunteers, Capt. C. Cornehlson; and the Cape Fear Light Artillery, Capt. John J. Hedrick; all under command of Col. John L. Cantwell, of 22d Regiment North Carolina Militia. On the 20th of May the Convention, which had assembled at Raleigh, passed the Ordinance of Secession, and shortly afterwards the Wilmington companies were relieved from duty at the forts. The Wilmington Light Infantry were first detached, and were sent to Federal (the Confederate) Point to build a battery there, which should command New Inlet Bar. This battery was built, and was by them called Bolles' battery, in honor of Major C. P. Bolles, the engineer who superintended its construction. During the month of June the Rifle Guards and the German Volunteers were relieved by other companies, and were sent to Wilmington to recruit their ranks, preparatory to entering into a regimental organization. In the meantime other companies were being raised here for service, the young men of the town, and those from the country around here, flocking in to answer the call for troops. They came from all directions, and were from all classes, the patriotic young men of the Cape Fear vying with each other in the eagerness with which they took up arms at the cry of the mother State, until gradually the life and youth and strength of the place all left us to do battle in Virginia, and until, finally, old men, and women and children, department officers and men, speculators from abroad, and a few exempts into the, in the vernacular of the times, "bomb-proof" made up the resident population of Wilmington.

*G. Z. French elected to fill the vacancy occasioned by the election of J. C. Abbot to the United States Senate.

The importance of this port, as a port, was not, it seems, lost upon the Confederate Government even as early as the first year of the war. Generals Gatlin, Anderson and French were successively placed in command, yet but little was done to complete the defences of the place until the month of November, 1862, when the lamented General W. H. C. Whiting was placed in command of the Department. Then, indeed, the work began in earnest, and Whiting, who ranked as one of the best engineers in the world, threw every energy of his mind and body into the work before him. The period for inaction had passed away. The Federal Government was already casting longing eyes towards this place, and there was much to be done to make us ready to receive them. The works at Fort Fisher, which had been commenced in 1861, were vigorously urged forward to completion; Smith's Island was cleared, and foundations for forts laid there; Fort Pender, at Smithville, was built, and soon the guns of Fort Anderson, first called Fort St. Phillip—the last great work of the defences to yield to the Federal hands—frowned from the heights of old Brunswick. For more than two years General Whiting was in command of this post, and during that time he worked unceasingly to complete the chain of Cape Fear defences. In addition to the forts we have named above, other and smaller batteries were planted at every available point, and obstructions and torpedoes lined the bed of the river.

During the year 1864 Wilmington had become the great point through which intercourse could be had with the outside world, and, consequently, it ranked that year as the most important commercial depot in the entire Confederacy. The amount of business transacted here by means of the low, swift English blockade-runners was enormous, especially so when it is considered that the Federal Government kept up a close and unceasing blockade of the entire coast, by night as well as by day. This, however, proved totally inefficient, the daring blockaders, with their low, grey painted hulls, and without a light to be seen from stem to stern of the steamer, oftentimes running, during a dark night, within pistol shot of one of the grim sentinels of the coast, and bringing in those supplies so greatly needed by the Confederate government for a successful continuation of the war. It is greatly to be regretted that the statistics of the operations of these blockade runners have been lost to us, as they would furnish matter of much interest to all; but from private memoranda we have been furnished with an account, as follows, of the arrivals at this port, which is not exact, but which only approximates the actual number.

From May 20th, 1863, to December 31st, 1864.....	250
Prior to May 20th, 1863.....	15

Notwithstanding the above facts, however, there was no demonstration made against the place until very near the close of the year 1864. On December 23d, 1864, the Federal fleet appeared in the offing opposite Fort Fisher, and that night Butler's Yankee toy, a boat containing 20,000 pounds of powder, was drifted in near the works and fired. The explosion was terrific, and is described by those who witnessed it from the fort as one of the most magnificent gratuitous displays of fire works that they had ever beheld. The concussion was very great, but no damage whatever was occasioned by it. The next day, Christmas Eve, the Federal war vessels, fifty-two in number, ranged themselves in line of battle opposite the fort, and about noon opened a most furious bombardment. This continued for five hours, when the fleet withdrew. The next day the bombardment was resumed, and, under cover of the guns of the fleet, a force was landed and an attempt made to storm the fort. The heroic defenders, however, succeeded in driving back their assailants, and the Federal forces drew off, defeated and discomfited, and having expended over twenty thousand shot and shell in the vain endeavor to subdue the fort. The next day the fleet sailed to the North.

Yet the relief was only temporary, for, on the 13th day of January, 1865, the Federal fleet again and suddenly appeared before the fort in a threatening attitude. They had arrived stealthily, and "like a thief, in the night," and early in the morning succeeded in landing a strong force. Unfortunately Hoke's division, which had been held here for the defence of the post, was at that time in Wilmington, and when they arrived at the scene, by a forced march, found the enemy entrenched entirely across the peninsula, from ocean to river. General Whiting, who was in Wilmington at the time, hurried to the fort at the first news of the appearance of the enemy. About noon of the 13th the fleet opened fire, and a bombardment even more terrific than the previous one soon ensued. The deluge of shot and shell was so terrific that it was impossible to man some of the guns, and the majority of the garrison were driven to the bomb-proofs for protection. From noon of the 13th until 3 o'clock of the afternoon of the 15th, the terrific fire was continued without intermission. At the last named hour the fire of the fleet was suddenly raised, and the land forces were discovered moving forward, in two columns, to the attack of different parts of the fort. One of these, moving up the line of sea beach, was easily repulsed, but the other, which advanced by the river front, succeeded in entering the fort. Here, for six hours, and in an almost hand to hand conflict, and fighting from terrace to terrace, was the conflict continued. The brave Whiting, and the gallant Col. Wm. Lamb, the commandant of the fort, were everywhere, cheering on the men by their presence and example, but it was in vain. Overpowered by numbers the last terrace was torn from the hands of the brave defenders, and they were forced beyond the enclosure of the fort. They retreated to the batteries on the shores of New Inlet, and at midnight, there being no means of escape at hand, General Whiting was compelled to surrender his little band of heroes to General Terry as prisoners of war. Both Whiting and Lamb were badly wounded in this engagement. The latter recovered, but the gallant Whiting died on Governor's Island, in New York harbor, where he was at the time confined as a prisoner of war.

The concluding portion of the tale is soon told. Fort Fisher fell, and the same night Fort Caswell and the other works at the mouth of the river were destroyed, and their garrisons withdrawn to Fort Anderson. Hoke, in the meantime, unable to succor Fort Fisher, had fallen back on the peninsula to within about four miles of Wilmington, where he strongly entrenched himself. Thus, Hoke on the left and Anderson on the right, succeeded in stemming the tide of invasion until, on the 17th of February, a portion of the Federal fleet steamed up the river and opened fire upon Fort Anderson—Schofield, in the meantime, moving up from Smithville with a land force, intending to flank the fort. This necessitated its evacuation, and on the 19th, before day, the guns were spiked and the little garrison retreated on Wilmington, reaching the place that night. They were closely pursued, and the following day, about noon, a detachment of Federal troops could be plainly seen from the city advancing along the causeway on Eagle's Island. A Whitworth piece was quickly brought up, and a shell, fired from the head of the Market House, was sent over to welcome them here. When the smoke arose they had gone, but an action ensued between their skirmishers and our own, which was witnessed by many in the city. Early on the morning of the 22d Hoke reached Wilmington, and a junction was effected with the troops from Fort Anderson. The city was then evacuated, the stores having been removed or destroyed on the previous day. The Federal troops pressed closely upon the heels of our ragged Confederates, who at last turned and thrashed them. This was in a little fight at the bridge over North East river, nine miles from the city, and was the last time that the North and the South crossed arms in the Cape Fear country. Two months afterwards the war had closed.

COMMERCE.

Wilmington has always enjoyed a good trade, and has ever been a public spirited, enterprising town. There are less idlers here, in proportion to the size of the place, than can be found in any Atlantic city, and the stirring, moving aspect of its people give it always a busy appearance. It has always engaged a good trade with the West India islands, exporting thence lumber, shingles, staves, naval stores, &c., and receiving in return the products of that clime. The intercourse with New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore has been steady and constant, there being at this time regular packet lines plying to and from these ports. These leave here with the various exports of the country, and return laden with miscellaneous merchandise for almost every want of every day life. Some idea may be formed of the business of the place by the following

It will be seen by the above that the export of naval stores, both coastwise and foreign, except in one instance, has fallen off greatly during the past decade, while, on the contrary, there has been a heavy increase, say about 120 per cent., in the shipments of cotton from this port. This is due, mainly, to the fact that during the past year, and in the country supplying this city, every interest was made subservient to the culture of cotton. Even the production of turpentine was of secondary importance compared with the zeal with which cotton was planted, so that Wilmington, the greatest naval store depot in the world, only exported coastwise one and one-third barrels of spirits turpentine to the bale of cotton; that is to say, the number of bales of cotton exported was 75 per cent. of the number of barrels of spirits turpentine.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

Among the public edifices, stand pre-eminent those of the City Hall and Thalian Hall, which are different buildings, although they present, together, one front on Princess street. Both of them are public property, and are under the control of the Mayor and Board of Aldermen. The City Hall building is most eligibly situated near the central portion of the city, and is a fine large building, built of brick, but stuccoed in imitation of brown stone; is in the Corinthian style of architecture, and is composed of the City Hall proper above, and various offices below, with the guard rooms, cells, &c., in the basement. The Hall room is large and commodious, and is capable of holding a vast assemblage. The Thalian Hall building, adjoining and connecting with that of the City Hall, is, in the interior, one of the most elegant structures to be found between Baltimore and New Orleans. The Theatre is handsomely built and most tastefully ornamented. The scenery, which is in great variety, was once very elegant, but a constant abuse has robbed it of much of its original beauty. The auditorium of Thalian Hall is a large and comfortable one, and, in all, is capable of accommodating 1,500 persons.

As Wilmington is the county seat of New Hanover, the Court House and Jail, the latter a fine structure, are located here, while adjoining the city is the County Poor House and the County Work House, this latter having been established since the close of the war.

The other public buildings, other than churches, school houses, &c., are the City Market House, Brooklyn Market House, Custom House and Marine Hospital. A petition is now pending before the United States Congress, praying for an appropriation for the erection of a more suitable building for a Post Office and Custom House, than is the one now owned by the government and used as such.

CHURCHES.

Wilmington could, with propriety, be called "The City of Churches," as the buildings devoted to public worship here are quite numerous.—Some of them are very handsome, three of these having been erected since the war. We do not think it at all extravagant to say that some of the most imposing church architecture to be found in the entire South may be seen in this city. These churches are filled every Sabbath with orderly and devout worshippers, and the stranger visiting the city is struck with the remarkable quiet and calm which has now become characteristic of a Sunday in Wilmington. It is seldom that any disturbance whatever occurs to interrupt the peaceful monotony which broods over us, relieved only by church going, a stroll to the cemeteries, or an exchange of social pleasures. The Day is, indeed, with us, a Day of Rest, the effect of which may rightfully be attributed to the influence of morality and religion, as reaching the masses through the numerous houses of worship with which our city is blessed.

PUBLIC INSTITUTIONS.

There are not many, the principal being Oakdale and Pine Forest Cemeteries, located within the eastern limits. The former is for the interment of whites, and the latter for the colored people. Oakdale is one of the most charming spots that we have ever seen. The grounds were not laid off until about 15 or 16 years ago. Yet the natural advantages of the place, aided by the great and continued care and attention that have been bestowed upon it, has made it one of the most beautiful spots in the entire State. Art and nature have met there and each has vied with the other in the attractions given to the place.—There our dead do rest from their warfare, and there it is that the living repair to offer up their floral tributes to departed friends, or to wander through the beautiful avenues and walks to meditate upon those ways of God which are past finding out. This Cemetery is less than a mile from the central business portion of the city, and is easily reached, either by a good carriage drive or else by a pleasant footpath. It is one of the principal attractions of the city, and strangers stopping here should not fail to see it.

To the rear of Oakdale is Pine Forest Cemetery, where the dead of the colored people find their last home and resting place. A great many attempts have been made to render it beautiful, in parts, and consequently there is much there to attract the meditative eye. Pine Forest will yet prove one of the prettiest places in the city.

There is also located here a National Cemetery, in which sleep a host of the Union dead, while in the lower end of the city is a Potter's Field, where the city gives interment to those who die here as paupers, care being taken, in all cases, to place the proper marks to each grave for a possible future identification.

RAILROADS AND TRANSPORTATION LINES.

In all, Wilmington can boast of three lines of railway now in actual operation, aggregating a distance of four hundred and forty-five miles, over which the iron horse speeds daily, bringing in to us the rich supplies of the interior. Of these the Wilmington & Weldon, one hundred and sixty-two miles in length, stretches along the entire seaboard route from Wilmington to Weldon; the Wilmington, Columbia & Augusta (formerly the Wilmington & Manchester) pierces one of the richest agricultural sections of South Carolina, one hundred and seventy-one miles distant, and with a projected line to Columbia, S. C., and from thence to Augusta, Ga, and the Wilmington, Charlotte & Rutherford Rail Road, aiming to reach Charlotte at an early day, is now completed to the Pee Dee river, one hundred and twenty-six miles from this city.—Various lines of steamers, making daily arrivals and departures here, connect us with Fayetteville, one hundred and twenty miles above the city; and small coasting vessels ply between this port and the eastern counties of the State, bringing in to us the rich grain products of the alluvial country, returning thence laden with merchandise purchased here. The productions of the different sections of country connected immediately with Wilmington by commercial intercourse, are various. The pine regions extending along the entire line of the Wilmington & Weldon and the Wilmington, Columbia & Augusta, and for a great distance on the Wilmington, Charlotte & Rutherford Rail Roads, as well as the sections traversed by the two Cape Fears and the South and Black rivers, is, perhaps, the richest turpentine and timber region in the world. From those different sections immense quantities of turpentine, tar, pitch, rosin, lumber and other products peculiar to a pine country, are obtained, and are constantly seeking and find a market in Wilmington. In addition, a new railway line is in contemplation between this city and Onslow county, and running along the low lands of the coast and opening up rich portions of the country in this section that have never yet been developed. A charter has been obtained from the Legislature for the Wilmington & Onslow Rail Road, and books of subscription have been opened. The friends of the enterprise predict that trains will be running on this road before the close of the present year. 4

FOREIGN TRADE.

Direct intercourse with the countries of the Old World has always been a cherished scheme in the mercantile circles of Wilmington, but, with the exception of a few stray shipments, and by sailing vessels of a medium capacity, this has been denied them. This want is due, in a great measure, to the unfortunate condition of our bar which, since the breaking out of New Inlet in 1761, has been gradually growing worse, the sand from the shoals and beaches around washing into the river and lodging on the bars at the Inlets. In 1853 a commission appointed by Congress to examine into the condition of our bar and river, reported that when vessels drawing 19 feet formerly entered with perfect ease, it is now a difficult matter to navigate one drawing but 13 feet. This will give some idea of the extent of the injury entailed upon our bar. Several efforts had been made, previous to the war, to remedy the evil, but a disastrous storm which occurred in 1858, nullified much of the labor that had been previously expended upon it. In 1870 (last year) the matter was again revived, and Congress was induced to appropriate $100,000 for a new system of operations. Col. J. H. Simpson, Corps of U. S. Engineers, was entrusted with the work, and Major Walter Griswold was sent here to superintend this construction. The work was begun and carried out, as far as they have yet gone, in a skillful and vigorous manner, and already beneficial effects are reported by the pilots at the mouth of the river. But the appropriation of $100,000 has been found insufficient and, unless Congress shall give further aid, the enterprise must be abandoned as soon as the appropriation in hand is expended. Col. Simpson, in this District, is fully impressed with the necessity of a continuance of the good work, and he and Major Griswold have each recently made full reports of the operations, thus far, and have urgently entreated of Congress to grant further aid. Should this be done, there is but little doubt but that the evil will be remedied and that, at no very distant day, Wilmington will be connected with Liverpool by a regular steamship line.

CLIMATE AND HEALTH.

Wilmington has always been remarkable for the salubrity of its climate, and for the general good health enjoyed by all classes of its people. The miasmas springing from the swamps and rice fields opposite the city are, no doubt, deadly in their nature, yet, as they rise and seek to flow above the city, they are met and checked by a more prompt agent. The healthful qualities of the pine, as they escape with the smoke from our numerous mills and distilleries and steamers, meet and mingle with this miasma, and rob it of its power to injure. At the same time the many natural drains which abound from the northern to the southern extremities of the place, bear with them, to the river, all filthy and decaying substances.

It is true that Wilmington has been visited by epidemics, but only in a few isolated cases, and then, in each instance, the disease was introduced here from abroad. In 1821, that terrible scourge, the yellow fever, appeared here for the first time. It was introduced by means of the brig John London, from some port in the West Indies. It raged with great violence for about six weeks, and a large proportion of the citizens of the little town, then numbering only about 2,500 inhabitants, were swept away by it. And in the Autumn of 1862 its ravages here were terrible. In this instance, as in the former, it was imported from the West Indies, and, on this occasion, by the blockade runner Kate, trading between this place and Nassau. For over ten weeks it raged with terrible violence, and at a period, too, when it was most difficult to combat its effects. Medicines and provisions were both scarce and high in price, and the little luxuries needed for the convalescent were most difficult to obtain. Those of the frightened inhabitants that were able to do so, fled the town; all business was abandoned, and the closed stores and silent streets gave the place the appearance of a deserted city. It was then, in that time of distress and suffering, that a few of the noble spirits of Wilmington rose equal to the emergency. Distributing food to the poor, medicines and attendance to the sick, consolation to the dying, and holy burial to the dead, they remained behind when many else had fled, and nobly fulfilled the trust they had assigned themselves. Some escaped, but others fell martyrs to as true heroism as the world has ever known. "Greater love than this hath no man, that a man should lay down his life for his friends."

MADE A CITY.

On the 20th day of February, 1866, the Legislature of North Carolina passed an act incorporating Wilmington as a city. On Thursday, March 8th, it was accepted by the citizens at the ballot box, when A. H. VanBokkelen was chosen Mayor, with a Board of eight Aldermen. Mr. VanBokkelen has been followed, successively, by John Dawson, Joseph H. Neff, and the present incumbent, Silas N. Martin, who is now filling a second term. By a recent act of the Legislature, the Wards of the city were changed, both as to locality and number, there now being five Wards, instead of four, as provided for in the Act of Incorporation. Each Ward is represented by two Aldermen.

The Knabe Piano has been awarded no less than the highest award over all competition at different State Fairs throughout the country, besides numerous other First Premiums at different country and other Fairs, in competition with the best factories in the country.

We would call special attention to our New Patent Concert Grand Pianos, which are, by the best judges, acknowledged to surpass anything heretofore made.

Our Patent Square Grands as near an approach in power and quality of tone to a Full Grand Piano as can possibly be attained in a square case.

All our Square Pianos have the full agraffé treble, full iron frame, double braced overstrung bass, and all the latest improvements.

Special attention is called to our New Improved Upright Piano.

By a number of new and valuable improvements, we have entirely obviated all objections heretofore urged against the Boudoir Piano, the tone being full and sonorous, of fine singing quality and perfectly even—the touch being easier than in any Square Piano, and stand in tone as well as the best Grand Piano.—This style being the fashionable Piano of Europe, is fast gaining in favor in our country.

EVERY PIANO IS FULLY WARRANTED FOR FIVE YEARS.

EXTRAORDINARY INDUCEMENTS

SETTLERS.

The undersigned having a Tract of Fine Land, and being desirous of introducing into this section of the State a thrifty agricultural element, offers the following inducements to Emigrants, or those desirous of settling in the Old North State. This tract comprises from eight to ten thousand acres of the best soil in the State, one thousand acres of which is under cultivation, and much more easily put in good condition. The soil is suited to the culture of Cotton, Corn, Potatoes, Wheat, Oats, Pea Nuts, Vegetables, and Fruits.

The land is well watered with living streams, and has a mile of fine water power upon it. It contains several thousand acres of the finest timber in the State.

The tract is situated in New Hanover County, and parallel to, and within one and a quarter to two and a half miles of the Wilmington and Weldon Railroad, and opposite two stations on the road. It is within one and a quarter hours of Wilmington, ten hours of Norfolk, twenty-two hours of Baltimore, by rail, and fifty-five hours of New York, by water. The tract is bounded by a stream navigable for large flats and rafts, which can be brought down to Wilmington, any season of the year, where a first class market can always be found.

I propose to cut this tract up into farms of Eighty Acres and upwards, to suit settlers, and on the following terms :

One dollar	per acre,	Cash.
Fifty cents	" "	in one year.
Fifty cents	" "	in two years.
One dollar	" "	in three years.
One dollar	" "	in four years.
One dollar	" "	in five years.
One dollar	" "	in six years.

Thus it will be seen that a man with from One to Two Hundred Dollars can put himself in possession of a good farm, which at once places the means within his reach of making himself independent.

These lands were worth before the war from $12 00 to $30 per acre, and as soon as the country has fully recovered from the effects of the late war they will go up to or beyond their former value. There are houses on the different farms for the comfortable accommodation of two hundred persons.

The advantages herein offered to emigrants may be summed up as follows :—

1st. Cheap lands, and the best climate in the world—with but three months of mild winter in the year—during all of which time the farmer can prepare his lands for the early Spring crops. Summer not warmer than in the Northern States.

2nd. These lands are situated near, and of easy access to, all the best markets in the States, and being twenty days earlier than Virginia and forty-eight hours nearer markets than Charleston, enables the producer to get his early vegetables to the Northern markets in advance of any other section, thereby receiving the extra prices for the “first of the season.”

3rd. There is no portion of the State that has as good a record for health and longevity as the site of this tract.

4th. The inhabitants, surrounding, are celebrated for their orderly conduct, and are considered to be pre-eminent for simplicity of manners, consistency of character, and devotion to principle.

5th. This is the most liberal proposition ever offered in the State to emigrants and settlers.

THE OLD AND RELIABLE New York Life Insurance Company.

PURELY MUTUAL.

NO STOCKHOLDERS TO TAKE FROM POLICY HOLDERS
ANY PORTIONS OF THE PROFITS,

A Prosperous Career of Twenty-Five Years.

CASH ASSETS. $13,000,000.

Has Insured 70,000 Lives, Paid over $5,000,000 to Widows and Orphans, and Returned nearly $5,000,000 in Cash Dividends to the Insured.

The undersigned are agents for this old and never to be doubted Company, for the States of Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi and North Carolina, and present it to their friends as in every manner worthy of their support. From its age, its great profits, its admirable management, its large cash capital, it offers inducements unsurpassed by any Company in the world—and equalled by very few. Not only do they present it as all a Company can be, in prosperous pecuniary condition, but as eminently just and impartial in its entire course to people of all sections and opinions, as to afford to none cause of complaint of unfair dealing. We sought it as the soundest and most reliable of Companies of this character—at the same time we examined more critically as to its dealings with Southern policy holders, whose policies lapsed during the war,—determined as we were not to represent any Company that discriminated against our own section. We feel that our own people will be satisfied when we assure them that, that investigation was gratifying to us, in showing not only exact and equal justice on their part, but a liberality that only needs to be known to be appreciated by the Southern people.

We are aware, however, that in many sections of the country, the agents of mixed and stock Companies (who fear a comparison of the admirable plans of the New York Life Insurance Company and its large annual cash dividends, all going to the policy holders—with theirs dividing their profits for the most part to Stockholders) misrepresent it as having discriminated against our own section—of course their motives are too plain—to build up business for themselves by defaming other Companies.

By the terms of all policies issued by the New York Life Insurance and all other Life Companies, service in actual warfare is excepted. This exception was as necessarily maintained against insurants in the army of the United States as against those who served in the Confederate armies, and affidavits and other sufficient evidence was required as to such service in the one army as the other, from those desiring to renew their policies, but when the purpose of such affidavit was ridiculously misrepresented, it was discontinued.

As agents, we have published, from our very first appointment, our readiness in behalf of the Company, to settle its outstanding business on terms of equity and liberality—to do as much as any Company, North or South, had ever done in reference to this class of policies.

Now as to the record—this Company received more Confederate money for premiums (even to the time of Butler's prohibitory order, and the action of agents so receiving it approved throughout,) than all other Companies North and South, put together. It has paid more money to parties on policies thus lapsed than all others. It is ready now, and always has been, to renew such lapsed policies upon receipt of back premiums, allowing back dividends, thus placing parties and the Company in the same condition as if there had been no war.

We only ask examination of its entire course for the most punctilious to be satisfied. Its officers are now what they have ever been, true and just as to the rights of policy holders, without regard to location or political differences. It has the ability to do for its policy holders what but few other Companies can do. Let those who wish life insurance, only examine it and not be deprived of its superior advantages by the detraction of agents of inferior Companies.

THE TEST !---SEE THE FIGURES

— AND —

EXAMINE FOR YOURSELF!

Every man who will examine for himself can learn from the Insurance Commissioners' Reports the exact standing of the principal Life Insurance Companies in the United States, and not be dependent upon the partial representations of interested Agents. He will see that the Purely Mutual Companies return to Policy holders their entire nett earnings, and that mixed Companies share their earnings with Stockholders and to that extent reduce their dividends to Policy-Holders. He will also see the exact amount of income and dividends of each; their increase or decrease in business; and as a sensible man prefer that Company that has actually Paid (not Promised or declared) the Largest Dividend in proportion to its income received, as furnishing the SAFEST INSURANCE at the LEAST COST.

The following table Compiled from Insurance Commissioners' Reports shows Incomes received and Dividends paid, as well as increase or decrease of business in 1866 as compared with 1867:

(Those Companies marked with a star are purely mutual; others mixed.)

Business of 1866 as compared with 1867.

The foregoing speaks for itself. To those who wish Everlasting and Never to be Doubted Life Insurance, we recommend the NEW YORK LIFE. It is impossible for any Company, consistently with security, to furnish insurance at less cost. It has AGE CHARACTER and WEALTH, and for the past quarter of a century has been distinguished for such excellent management as to make it almost the perfection of a Life Insurance Company.
